GENERAL WILSON.

The Republican victory in Delaware-described by the press as "a most notable breach in the Solid South"—is said to have been mainly due to the exertions of two men. Mr. Anthony Higgins and Gaueral J. H. Wilson. The latter i so well known in China and Japan that the following extracts from the Cincinnati Gazette will interest many of our readers:-

The second man is General James H. Wilson. the distinguished cavalryman. He has been a citizen of Delaware since the war and an active. worker with Mr. Higgins. Everybody who knows anything of our war knows of him as Grant's engineer officer in the Vicksburg campaign. Sherman's chief of cavalry on the march to Atlanta, the commander of the Union cavalry in the battle of Nashville and the movements which proceded it, and the commander of that cavalry army which swept through the South after Nashville and drew rein only with the capture of Jefferson Davis. He was a Major General of cavalry at twenty-six. He was one of the brightest graduates of West Point and one of the quickest among them to imbibe the spirit of the volunteers and to make his mark with them. For years he has been one of the most active indignation of some Enropean onlookers was among those politicians who had no personal ends in view.
